Demographics matter. The size and nature of a country's population has a tremendous effect on Canada's economic and social well-being. Likewise, the state of our environment also has profound influence on the same things. Are concerns about climate change changing our country's demographic future? We are bringing together data, scholars, and public intellectuals to address this critical question.

Darrell Bricker – CEO, Ipsos Global Public Affairs

Prior to joining Ipsos in 1990, Darrell was Director of Research in the office of Canada's Prime Minister. He was also a research consultant with firms in Ottawa and Toronto. Darrell has written several books, including Empty Planet: The Shock of Global Population Decline (with John Ibbitson.) He holds a PhD in Political Science from Carleton University, and a BA and MA from Wilfrid Laurier University.

Lyman Stone – Senior Fellow, Cardus Family

As a demographer specializing in fertility and family, Lyman's work explores the connections between social values and attitudes, economic systems, and family formation. He is also the director of research at the consulting firm Demographic Intelligence, a Research Fellow at the Institute for Family Studies, and a PhD candidate in sociology at McGill University.

Ginny Roth – Partner, Crestview Strategy

Ginny advises multinational corporations, domestic companies, and non-profits on government relations in Canada. She is a sought-after political commentator, appearing frequently on major media outlets. Ginny is also a contributor to The Hub and National Post. Prior to joining the Crestview Strategy team, Ginny worked at Queen's Park as an organizer for the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario and has been a lifelong political activist.

Andrea Mrozek – Senior Fellow, Cardus Family

Andrea's career has spanned journalism and think tanks in Europe and Canada. Immediately prior to joining Cardus, she was Executive Director of the Institute of Marriage and Family Canada where she wrote and spoke about marriage, child care, and women's issues. Her opinion pieces have appeared in newspapers across Canada, and she's a frequent guest on TV and radio shows.

Peter Jon Mitchell – Program Director, Cardus Family

Peter Jon has spent a decade and a half researching and writing about Canadian families and public policy. Active in the media, his articles have appeared in the National Post, Toronto Sun, Financial Post, and Law Now among other publications. Peter Jon holds a ThM and MTS from Tyndale Seminary and a degree in history and political science from the University of Western Ontario.
